

Truck crushes 2 DELSU final year students

By Efe Onodjæ

TEARS flowed freely, yesterday, in the university town of Abraka as two final year students of the Department of Economics, Delta State University, DELSU, were crushed by a truck that fell on them.

The two students met their untimely death at about noon at the Abraka roundabout.

According to eyewitnesses, the driver of the truck of a popular cement company was trying to avoid hitting a motorcyclist when the cement he was conveying with the truck fell on the victims.

The identities of the students were yet to be made public by the management of the institution at press time.

The condition of the driver of the truck, which fell on its side, was also unknown at press time, as he and the motorcyclist were reportedly rushed to an undisclosed hospital.
