Father of two strangles 37-yr-old lover in Ondo

By Esther Onyegbula

THE Ondo State Police Command is currently investigating a 40-year-old mechanic, Oluwale Oluwale, for allegedly strangling his lover at Oke Igbo community in Ondo state.

Oluwale, the father of two, reportedly invited his lover, Biola Soyinka, who resides in Lagos to his base in Ondo State on January 3rd.

Vanguard learned that Oluwale camped Biola outside his home at Oke Igbo community in Ondo State because of his wife. However, Oluwale called Biola's younger sister to inform her that she had died.

According to Biola's elder brother, Akeem Jinadu, who spoke to Vanguard, "On the 16th of January, we received a call from Oluwale that my sister Biola had passed on. When we asked what happened to her? He said: Biola became unconscious after she slumped at about 4 am on Sunday 16th of January.

"Oluwale said by the time he rushed her to the hospital, the doctors declared her dead. When we asked him to bring her corpse back to Lagos, he demanded that we send money for transportation."

Jinadu added: "Contrary to what Oluwale said when the police arrested him, there were marks sustained from beating on her body when we went to identify the remains at the morgue.

"Her neck, face, and body had dark patches because she was a fair person. From the state of her corpse it is very obvious she didn't die from falling, rather the marks on her body show she was beaten and strangled to death."

Explaining further, Akeem Jinadu said: "We are still trying to raise two hundred and fifty thousand naira for her autopsy as demanded by the doctor."

Vanguard gathered that at the hospital when Oluwale discovered that Biola had died, he hurriedly sneaked out before he was caught and handed over to the police while attempting to escape.

Although the police have assured the family of the deceased that justice will be done, they are yet to visit the scene of the incident.
