

Edo man flees after killing pregnant wife

By Ozioruva Aliu

A young man simply identified as Inuaghata is currently on the run for allegedly killing his pregnant wife while the bereaved father-in-law, Adun Samuel, has offered to pay N100,000 to anybody that could provide information leading to his arrest.

Adun, who spoke to journalists in Benin City, said his daughter has three children for the fleeing husband adding that he was called that his daughter had been killed by her husband.

He stated that the son in-law fled into hiding since May 24 when he committed the offence

He said "I hail from Orhionmwon local government. My daughter was killed by her husband. She was 23-years-old. The incident happened at Egba on the 24th of last month. I do not understand the problem they had. I was called that my daughter had been killed. He used knife to slit her throat. My daughter was pregnant when she was killed. I want the boy arrested.

"I will give anybody that can provide information leading to his arrest the sum of N100,000. The boy had not formally married my daughter. His parents are both dead. I have called his brother.
