4 die in sewage pit in Imo community

Four young men lost their lives in Egbu, Owerri North LGA Imo State weekend while attempting to evacuate dung from a sewage pit at Umunwokoji Umuayalu village.

It was gathered that the incident that took mysterious dimensions saw the four workers taking turns to enter into the pit without coming out alive.

According to the information from a resident who doesn't want his name mentioned, the first person entered the well to evacuate the dung but was unable to climb out.

"In an attempt to rescue him, the second person entered too, followed by the third and fourth persons, all of whom lost their lives under such mysterious circumstances," the source said.

The remains of the four victims were later evacuated and deposited in the mortuary.

The cause of their deaths is yet to be determined.

An environmental engineer, Sunday Ihekire while commenting on the incident said, "This incident is a tragic reminder of the importance of prioritizing safety protocols while embarking on such potentially hazardous activities.

"Our thoughts are with the families and loved ones of the victims during this difficult time."
