Description: Around 400 people have been killed during two days of clashes between Muslim and Christian rivals gangs in the central Nigerian city of Jos. Rival ethnic and religious mobs burned homes, shops, mosques and churches in fighting triggered by a disputed local election in a city at the crossroads of Nigeria's Muslim north and Christian south. It's the country's worst unrest for years. Helen Long reports. Soundbite: Female survivor and mother of four month old baby. [Reuters]
